The Archaeology of Australia's Deserts

by Mike Smith, National Museum of Australia, Canberra

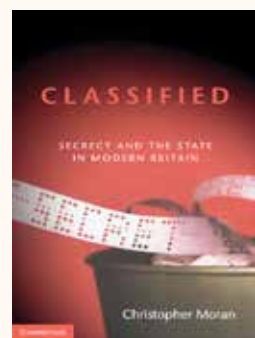

This is the first book-length study of the archaeology of Australia's deserts, one of the world's major habitats and the largest block of drylands in the southern hemisphere. The Archaeology of Australia's Deserts explores the late Pleistocene settlement of Australia's deserts, the formation of distinctive desert societies, and the origins and development of the hunter-gatherer societies documented in the classic nineteenth-century ethnographies of Spencer and Gillen. Written by one of Australia's leading desert archaeologists, the book interweaves a lively history of research with archaeological data in a masterly survey of the field and a profoundly interdisciplinary study that forces archaeology into conversations with history and anthropology, economy and ecology, and geography and Earth sciences.

A Short Introduction to Climate Change

by Tony Eggleton, Australian National University

Launched by Dr. John Hewson in early November

"The issue is very significant. The challenge is very real. The challenge needs to be dealt with now"
Dr. John Hewson, former leader of the Liberal Party sees this book as an "enormous contribution" to climate change awareness, especially in light of the carbon tax, as it is written in a form that can be understood by the layperson on the street with an interest in climate change.
